

Baraboo Arms Plant Also to Be Reactivated

As plans are progressing rapidly for the resumption of operations at Kankakee Ordnance works by U. S. Rubber company, the Army Ordnance Ammunition Center at Joliet announced today that plans are also being made to reactivate an ordnance plant at Baraboo, Wis.

Col. John Zierdt, executive officer of the OAC, said today that the army is planning to reactivate the Badger Ordnance works at Baraboo.

"We have been instructed by Washington to get the buildings in shape and to get ready to go," Col. Zierdt reported.

The ordnance center here has jurisdiction over all army ordnance loading plants and similar explosive works in the U. S.
